

Melina Rezaei

Law Practice

Melina Rezaei is a transactional and litigation attorney serving community associations. Her practice includes representing associations in all aspects of civil litigation, as well as providing strategic counsel on real estate and land use matters. Melina regularly reviews and interprets governing documents, contracts, and regulatory requirements, advising clients on compliance with California law and ensuring their operations run smoothly and lawfully.

Her work combines a detail-oriented approach with an understanding of the practical realities faced by community associations. She is known for her ability to navigate disputes with efficiency, resolve compliance concerns proactively, and provide clear guidance to boards and property managers.

Melina began her legal career at the firm as a law clerk before joining as an associate. While in law school, she served as Articles Editor for the Berkeley Journal of International Law and gained diverse legal experience, including immigration advocacy and corporate law.
